MILTON's Maſk of Comus.

NOTHING is of greater importance to the well-being of a man in promiſcuous concerns, than ſeaſons of retirement from rry and tumult; and nothing productive f joys more ſublime to a mind of real elicacy. Amidſt the fatigues of multi- licity of buſineſs our thoughts and affec- ons are in danger of being unduly en- roſſed; and if we receiv'd no impreſ- ons abſolutely criminal from the ſur- ounding objects of buſy life, yet their ertain, their neceſſary effect, is to in- iſpoſe us for thoſe contemplations, which every wiſe man would be ambitious to cultivate, and which every man who cul- tivates muſt be wiſe and happy in the ſame roportion.

The human mind, whoſe governing rinciple is a deſire of happineſs, is in- luenc'd by the ſame motive to ſociety, as a grand conſtituent of rational enjoyment: ut ſociety, which, ſimply conſider'd, is ood, by exceſs or abuſe, becomes an evil and miſchief.

I have often conſider'd the motto of this paper, as the moſt ſublime and expreſ- ive panegyric upon retirement that any rofane author has given; and whoever eads it with the ſame ſpirit in which it is ritten, will need no further arguments o evince the benefit and neceſſity of the uty it recommends.

Contemplation is that food or nutri- ent which is neceſſary to maintain the oul in a healthy and vigorous ſtate; to ecruit our expence upon the inferior con- erns of life.---We every day meet with mething we wiſh other than it is; and he influence of every leſſer diſappoint- ent, tho' perhaps not ſo ſenſibly or im- ediately felt, is not therefore leſs certain, r leſs prejudicial. A ſtate of moral onfuſion and diſorder muſt neceſſarily llow, a train of adverſe events, unleſs we an derive from the aſſiſtance of reaſon mewhat to caſt into the oppoſite ſcale. ow reaſon is moſt familiar in her viſits the man, who by retirement calms all s paſſions to reſt, for her temple, the reaſt of a reaſonable being, muſt be ear'd of every prophaner gueſt, before ſhe ill deign to inhabit it.

Whoever then is deſirous to preſerve a gular, harmonious ſyſtem of affections, ill frequently diſencumber himſelf from ufineſs and company, that he may have othing to interrupt a ſerious and familiar onverſe with his own mind, to take cognisance of what has been faulty in his paſt conduct, to humble himſelf upon account of it before the great ſearcher of hearts, and to implore his gracious prevention and aid, whereby to maintain, for the future, a more exemplary and conſiſtent behaviour. Exerciſes of this nature diſcreetly performed, have a moſt happy influence on the ſoul, inſpiring it with conſtant chearfulneſs and ſerenity; for the moſt elevated joy of a reaſonable nature, muſt be the teſtimony of conſcience, that the general courſe of his life has been conſiſtent with reaſon and fitneſs, or at leaſt, that any paſt deviations from thoſe everlaſting principles of action have been aton'd for, by repentance and amendment; thoſe eaſy and infallible conditions of regaining the forfeited favour of God.

But reflection will diſcover to the man who has beſt fulfill'd the intention of providence in aſſigning him that claſs of rational exiſtence he poſſeſſes: Reflection, I ſay, will diſcover, even to this man, ſufficient degrees of imperfection to excite humility: And I know no argument ſo admirably calculated to ſet in motion every ſpring of gratitude and endeavours for rendering to him the moſt acceptable tribute we can pay, as the condeſcenſion of the author of happineſs, in making our acceptance with himſelf to depend upon ſuch plain, eaſy, and reaſonable conditions.

Theſe are conſiderations ſufficient to diſpoſe us to retirement, as the means of collecting our diſſipated faculties, and of cheriſhing thoſe diſpoſitions which only can preſerve our minds well ballaſted thro' the perilous voyage of life.

We are every day in danger of being betrayed, whilſt ignorant of our foes, and unacquainted with their artifices; and there is no method ſo likely to contribute to a man's ſecurity in this point, as for him frequently to revolve in his memory, the methods and degrees whereby former approaches have been carried on againſt his virtue: Whoever has been obſervant of theſe, may traverſe the enemy in his firſt advances; but he who is entirely ignorant in this particular, ſees no neceſſity for ſtanding to his arms, 'till the foe comes upon him unprepared to reſiſt, cloath'd in all the terrors of ſuddenneſs and ſurprize; and thereby prevents him from finding recourſe to the ſuccours which reaſon offers. But contemplation teaches a man the great ſcience of defence, enables him by foreſight, to apprehend the danger approaching, and renders familiar to him all the arts of ſubtlety, and efforts of violence, ſo that when exerted, the mind knows what to oppoſe.

Thus far we have conſidered retirement as a moral duty: I ſhall cloſe this paper with a few reflections on the preſent entertainment it miniſters to a reaſonable nature.

That principle of conſciouſneſs we call the ſoul, its pleaſures and anxieties, chiefly ſpring from the harmonious operation of its ſeveral faculties; if theſe are ſedate, peaceful, and regular, compoſure of mind is the neceſſary reſult; but, if turbulent, diſcompoſure will be the no leſs certain conſequence.

The great deſign of the ſtoic philoſophy, was to inculcate a belief, that pleaſure and pain are only ideal, and things which have no proper contrariety each to the other: We are not credulous enough, now-adays, to acquieſce in any propoſitions ſo pregnant of abſurdity; but were our ſentiments more influenced by reaſon, and leſs by caprice, we ſhould not heſitate to acknowledge, that a great part of the natural evil we ſuffer, is the child of imagination alone; that much would be abſolutely annihilated, that more would appear intrinſically good, and deſirable, when received by ſober reflection: 'Tis therefore, no leſs important for a man to be converſant with himſelf, by retirement and reflection, than to maintain that peace of mind, which will ſpeak for him more emphatically, than all the enemies of his tranquility can againſt him.

Theſe are ſome of the principal advantages that ariſe from retirement, and ſelf-converſe; they not only nip the ſuggeſtions of vice in their firſt bloſſoms, but are extremely propitious to every benign affection: They make life glide on with a ſmooth and peaceful current, refreſhing all around, and when we launch out into the vaſt ocean of eternity, the man who has accuſtomed himſelf to theſe, will be found ſo far maſter of his voyage, as to fear no hidden dangers, but may welcome the gale, and exult in the current, which will bear him, with the wiſh'd for rapidity, towards the port he is ambitious to arrive at.

Annapolis, October 18.

On the eleventh inſtant died, at his ſeat on Wye River in Queen Anne's county, RICHARD BENNETT, Eſq; in the eighty-third year of his age, generally lamented by all that knew him. As his great fortune enabled him to do much good, ſo (happily for many) his inclination was equal to his ability, to relieve the indigent and diſtreſſed, which he did very liberally, without regarding of what party, religion or country, they were. As he was the greateſt trader in this province, ſo great numbers fell in his debt, and a more merciful creditor could not be, having never deprived the widows or orphans of his debtors of a ſupport; and when what the debtors left, was not ſufficient for that purpoſe, frequently ſupply'd the deficiency. By his will he has forgiven above one hundred and fifty of his poor debtors, and has made proviſion for the maintainance of many of his overſeers, and other dependents; and ſettled a ſum of money to be paid annually to the poor of a pariſh in Virginia; and done many other acts of charity and munificence. His long experience and great knowledge in buſineſs, as well as his known candor and generoſity, occaſion'd many to apply to him for advice and aſſiſtance, and none were ever diſappointed of what was in his power, and ſeveral were, by his means, extricated out of great difficulties. He was always ſolicitous to prevent differences among his neighbours, and to reconcile ſuch as he could not prevent. In ſhort, nothing gave him ſo much pleaſure as doing humane and benevolent actions; and it may be truly affirm'd, that by his death, the poor and needy have loſt their greateſt friend and benefactor.

November 15. A ſmall veſſel, loaded with tar, coming from Somerſet county, was ſeen in great diſtreſs, near Thomas's Point, on Friday night, the 27th of laſt month, and has not been heard of ſince, ſo that ſhe is given over for loſt.

NEWYORK, November 27.

By a letter from Capt. Tingley, of the ſhip Indian King, of this port, dated in the bay of Honduras, the 18th of September laſt; we are inform'd of a terrible gale of wind at North, on the 8th of that month, they then being about 25 leagues to the eaſtward of Rattan; wherein they were obliged to cut away their foremaſt, to keep her above water; and ſoon after the mainmaſt, mizenmaſt and bowſprit, all blew away by the violence of the wind; and their tiller breaking off in the rudder head, ſhe became a perfect wreck for upwards of 12 hours, every moment expecting to be their laſt; when the wind hapily ſhifting to E. S. E. they made ſhift to ar themſelves of Rattan:-----The gale inued to the 10th before they could e any ſail; when they had only their allant ſails for courſes, and their oat's ſail for a mizen, all the others being carried off; in which condition they arrived the 13th. They had ſeveral of heir hands much bruiſed; but by good providence, all their lives were ſaved:--- The letter further informs, that ſeveral veſſels have been put aſhore there, and ſome wreck'd; amongſt which is a Philadelphia brigt. entirely loſt.

By ſome Jamaica News-papers received here laſt week, of the middle of October, we find, that markets are exceſſive low in that iſland, light flour being 25s. per barrel, and the heavieſt but 45s. Northern beef 40s. per barrel, pork 3 to 4 l. butter 10d. per lb. and moſt other things proportionably; whilſt flour continues here at a great price, and abundance of veſſels lie by the wharffs, not knowing where to go: At South Carolina about the middle of October, beef was only 27 s. per barrel, this currency, and pork about 44s.

RUn away from the ſubſcriber, living near Queen Anne, an indented Scotch ſervant man, named James Dundaſs, about 24 years of age, of low ſtature, with ſhort hair, which he may probably cut off, or conceal with a coarſe yarn cap; he ſpeaks quick and coarſe, but with little of the Scotch accent; has a ſtrutting gait, and a remarkable twinkling with his eyes when ſpeaking to ſuperiors; he writes tolerably, and may forge a paſs; talks of having been a ſoldier and a ſailor, pretends to underſtand navigation, and is ſuppoſed to have a nocturnal in his pocket. He had on, or with him, a grey half thick coat and breeches, with white metal buttons, not much worn; an old blue ſailor's jacket, and wide trowſers; dark colour'd yarn ſtockings, turn-up ſoal'd ſhoes, half worn, braſs buckles ſquare and carv'd, a felt hat, half worn, an old oſnabrigs and an old check'd ſhirt. He was intruſted in the morning with a Twenty ſhilling bill, and took with him a pretty tall roan horſe, low in fleſh, branded I D and trots; and a new deep ſkirted ſaddle, with iron ſwivel ſtirrups, but no houſing. Whoever takes up the ſaid ſervant, and ſecures him, ſo as his maſter may have him again, if taken in this county, ſhall have Twenty ſhillings more than the law allows; if in any other county of this province, Forty ſhillings more than the law allows; and if in another province, Four Pounds of the currency where taken; reaſonable charges if brought home; and Twenty ſhillings for the horſe and ſaddle, paid by WILLIAM BROGDEN.

Philadelphia, December 5. 1749.

RUn away on the 26th of laſt month; from Luke Morris of this city, Rope-maker, an Iriſh ſervant man, named Patrick Kirk, about 21 years of age, of middle ſtature, has a hitch or uncommon way of walking, as if his hip or knees had been hurt: He carried with him ſeveral ſhirts, a pair of leather breeches, and kerſey jacket, both with braſs buttons, a green napt jacket, new lined with blue, a green under waiſtcoat, and an old browniſh colour'd great coat, with the nap wore off, with ſundry other clothes; his clothes are a little tarr'd; and may paſs for a ſailor, by the name of Richard Sweet. Whoever takes up ſaid ſervant, and ſecures him, ſo that he may be had again, ſhall have Five Pounds reward, and reaſonable charges, paid by

Maryland,
Cecil County, ſſ.

BRoke out of Cecil-county goal, at the Court-houſe, upon Elk-river, in the ſame county, on the Night of the 17th inſtant, Joſeph Wilſon, a Perſon under ſentence of death, for counterfeiting the current money of Maryland. He is remakably tall, pale complexioned, ſtrong featured, a middle aged man, with his hair cut, and generally wears a cap under his hat; was cloathed in a blue cloth coat, with red lining and braſs buttons, old red pluſh breeches, old thread ſtockings, and pumps with braſs buckles: He is a very audacious fellow, and very talkative, was, when firſt taken, a ſchoolmaſter, in Newcaſtle county, Pennſylvania, but is good at many trades, viz. clock and watch-making, ſadlery, &c. and as he has been at ſea, may pretend he is a ſailor; he is an old offender, and well acquainted with moſt parts of North America, ſo that 'tis probable he may change both his name and his cloaths.

Theſe are therefore, in his Lordſhip's name, to command all conſtables and other the good people of this Province, to purſue after the ſaid Joſeph Wilſon, by way of hue and cry; and the inhabitants of the neighbouring provinces, are required to uſe their utmoſt endeavours to apprehend and ſecure the ſaid convicted felon, as they expect the ſame ſervice from us, on the like occaſions. Given under my hand and ſeal, this 18th day of November, 1749. THOMAS COLVILL.

Whoever ſhall take up the ſaid felon, and ſecure him, ſo that he may be delivered to the ſubſcriber, at the goal aforeſaid, ſhall receive as a reward TEN PISTOLES, from MICHAEL EARLE, Sheriff.
